

The seasonal guide.

What the fjord does in each season, what is on, and what to bring. Nine cabins, open all year, no Wi-Fi.

01 — MAY TO AUGUST

Light that doesn't leave.

In June the sun drops behind the wall at midnight and is back within the hour. Kayaks wait at every jetty, the waterfalls run at full volume, and dinner on the deck can last until eleven without a lamp.

02 — SEPTEMBER TO OCTOBER

Copper, then quiet.

The birches turn in the last week of September and most visitors go home. Mist stays late in the mornings, the stove goes on by four, and the first aurora nights arrive in October.

03 — NOVEMBER TO MARCH

Snow to the water's edge.

Snow reaches the shore and the fjord stays open, black and steaming. Days are short and blue. You spend them between the sauna, the stove and the window, and go out when the light is good.

04 — OCTOBER TO MARCH, AFTER DARK

Not a month. A condition.

You need clear sky, real dark and a little luck. We have the dark. Without Wi-Fi there is nothing to check but the sky, so every cabin has a forecast card, a thermos and a pile of blankets by the door.

BEST HOURS

Before you come.

GETTING HERE

Drive to Gudvangen, about two and a half hours from Bergen, and park at the quay. A small boat takes you and your bags along the shore to your cabin. Exact times arrive with your confirmation.

NIGHTS

Minimum two nights, open all year. Arrival from 15:00, departure by 11:00. Linen, towels, firewood, kayaks and a welcome basket are included.

SIGNAL

There is no Wi-Fi, and very little mobile signal. A landline in the boathouse handles emergencies.

RATES PER NIGHT (NOK), QUIETEST SEASON

CABIN	SLEEPS	FROM
Tåke, 24 m ²	2	3,200
Fonn, 38 m ²	4	4,600
Bjørk, 56 m ²	6	6,900

Rates rise in midsummer and the aurora weeks. The one-off cleaning fee is 650 NOK.

PACK, BY SEASON

Summer — swimwear, a light wool layer, sun cream

Autumn — waterproofs, boots, a hat

Winter — thermals, a down jacket, spikes for boots

Aurora — warm socks, a headtorch with a red light
